5. Describe the specific target population.

For instance: Is it current congregants/members/participants who have never participated in a meaningful Jewish learning experience? Is it school-age children who are leaving your educational programs after bar or bat mitzvah? Is it community members who are not currently engaged in any Jewish activity? Is it an expanded audience including friends or acquaintances of those who usually attend your programs? Is this an investment in enhancing a program you have run in the past that will help you attract more participants in the future? *

6. Tell us the reason you are focusing on this population.

For instance: Is it because it is an underserved demographic group? Is it because they are leaders (or potential leaders) who are committed to your organization in other ways but have never enriched their experiences through Jewish study? Is it because you believe that your organization has a unique ability to reach and serve this group of individuals? *

7. Methodology:

How are you planning to engage participants in order to build their level of commitment from that of unengaged or episodic learners to people who will make commitments to lifelong and ongoing Jewish learning? *

8. Evaluation: How will you know you are successful?

Provisions for program evaluation will be an important consideration in the review of your proposal. *
